To Whom It May Concern:

It is with great pride that I recommend Morgan Mickavicz. It is also truly an honor because in my nearly fifteen years in public education, nobody has stood out or engendered more pride in me than Morgan. Her choice to become an English teacher is a boon to the profession.

I've known Morgan for nearly six years now. Throughout her tenure as a student in my AP class, Morgan routinely cultivated a strong, positive relationship with peers as both a mentor and a guiding force. Her brilliant insights into texts were a model to be followed. Morgan listens to and weighs ideas and produces nothing but thoughtful work.

I firmly believe Morgan will be successful because of her genuine love of education. During her college career, I've had the opportunity to see her in action during times where she came to present lessons to my classes. There's a reason teachers call students their "kids"-- that's who these young men and women are to us. So it is with Morgan. Anytime one of our kids had a problem with comprehension, she was able to swoop in and clarify while simultaneously maintaining classroom discipline. It's wonderful to see somebody with that level of skill already.

Frankly, I could write a novel's length of anecdotes about demonstrations of Morgan's ability. I only have limited space, however. Suffice it to say that I recommend Morgan wholeheartedly and without reservation. Please don't hesitate to contact me if you have any questions. It would be my pleasure to highlight Morgan's impeccable qualifications with the full knowledge that whomever hires here would be gaining a distinguished and capable teacher.

Sincerely,

Tom Borthwick
